No case of coronavirus has been reported at the Czech Technical University in Prague, and nobody directly infected with coronavirus has been present in the CTU buildings.

For preventive reasons, classes at the Faculty of Mechanical Engineering and at the Faculty of Electrical Engineering of CTU, which share a building, were cancelled today (Monday). Staff were for today asked to work from home. The other faculties and parts of the university were unaffected by these measures. The measures were taken because a colleague from the University of Life Sciences (also known as the University of Agriculture) working at the same faculty of the University of Life Sciences as a professor infected in Udine, who is now in na Bulovce hospital, was in one of the ground floor rooms at the Faculty of Mechanical Engineering last Friday.

The premises were therefore closed for preventive reasons, and have been disinfected. CTU is in touch with the health and hygiene station of the Capital City of Prague, with which we are in constant contact and are dealing with the situation.

We assume that both faculties of the university will return to standard operations tomorrow (Tuesday).
